We're thrilled to announce that construction has begun on Torres de Palermo Hollywood, a development of three, Class-A boutique office buildings located in the Palermo Hollywood neighborhood of Buenos Aires. This neighborhood is one of the city's most vibrant—known for its Art Nouveau, Art Deco, and the locally popular "Casa Chorizo" architectural legacies—and is a center for creative new media and fashion enterprises.

Working with ZasLavarello&Asociados and our client UZ Financial Advisors, we've envisioned a specialized type of commercial architecture, designed to provide highly-curated spaces and experiences.

The three buildings present unique infill conditions—closely related, but not physically connected. Using a consistent "kit of parts" approach, the facades present a strong, memorable identity to the composition. Angled frames, fritted glass, and colorful metal trim bring depth and detail to each building, while enabling the development to be easily identified as a connected whole, despite having no direct adjacencies
